

June 2021 Ethics Bowl: Final Round Judges' Biographies

Sarah Bayer is an associate at Constantine Cannon LLP in New York. She practices antitrust law, which addresses unfair competitive practices by corporations. Prior to joining Constantine Cannon, Sarah clerked for Chief Magistrate Judge Cheryl L. Pollak in the U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of New York. Sarah is a graduate of Harvard Law School. While in law school, she defended tenants in eviction cases and advocated for new laws to stop workplace sexual harassment. Before law school, she worked for several years as a researcher for labor unions, helping with organizing campaigns and contract negotiations on behalf of auto workers, janitors, and airport workers. She attended an IB high school program and got her B.A. in English at Brandeis University.

Maxwell Levine is a mathematician working at the University of Freiburg. His research focuses on a subfield of mathematical logic called set theory, which pertains to axiom systems and their relationship to transfinite numbers. He has published papers in an array of journals, including Journal of Symbolic Logic and Proceedings of the American Mathematical Society. Before coming to Freiburg, he graduated with Honors from the University of Chicago with a degree in mathematics, earned his PhD at the University of Illinois at Chicago, and held a postdoctoral position at the University of Vienna.

J. Reid Miller is an Associate Professor of Philosophy at Haverford College. He received his PhD in History of Consciousness at the University of California, Santa Cruz, where he was a University of California President's Postdoctoral Fellow as well as a Ford Fellow. He is the author of Stain Removal: Ethics and Race (Oxford, 2016), which examines the historical co-development of modern theories of value and race. He specializes in metaethics and the philosophy of race, with a focus on structural histories of language, subjectivity, and embodiment. His areas of interdisciplinary research and teaching include black studies, structuralism/poststructuralism, visual and literary theory, postcolonial philosophy and ethics, and queer theory.
